HOWARD WATCH AND CLOCK CO.

NEW ELECTRIC WATCHMAN'S REGISTER AND CLOCK

For making and preserving a correct record of the work of watchmen in mills, factories and other buildings, or wherever the duties of the watchman may lead him.

The register may be placed in the office, or in any building near or remote from the watchman's duties, one wire only being necessary to connect with various points which the watchman is desired to visit in his tour of duty. Occasionally a second wire may be used to advantage. At every such point a recording box is placed, into which the watchman inserts his key (which fits all boxes alike) and the electric currents are, by contact, allowed to pass through the wire and automatically record the specific number of each—and at the moment he visits it. The record is made on a circular piece of paper which revolves once in twelve hours, or on a strip of paper placed in the Register, in rolls one month in length. It is not necessary that the boxes or stations shall be visited in any particular order or any equal number of times, for the record of each box is given, independently of any other; and the route of the watchman may be changed, either in direction, or by shortening or lengthening; and the record tells you the truth of what has been done by the watchman. Should the watchman visit any one station two or more times to one visit to any or all other stations, the record will show it intelligently in the morning. The record thus shows the time occupied in making any part of the round, and in making the entire round, and how much time is occupied by the watchman, while off duty, between the rounds.
